Fast Quiz is a lightweight educational program whose main purpose resides in helping teachers manage classes and students, as well as creating and administering customized exercises and tests. Unorganized and slightly confusing GUI The application features a bright and colorful user interface, but it can prove rather disconcerting at times, as it resorts to using different windows for every component you wish to access. Some of the windows that keep popping up in full screen are not entirely resizable and often you are unable to view them in full, requiring to either scroll down or even close and reopen them again. Manage students and their results or create and administer tests To get things started, you will need to input a series of basic information about the unit where you teach, along with the class and lesson. However, it only seems possible to do this for a single class, meaning that if you teach to several of them, you will not be able to manage them simultaneously through Fast Quiz. Afterward, you can begin to add a 'New Student Entry', specifying their ID number, full name, contact information, as well as monitor their general performance level on various courses, exams and periods. The data can be exported to an Excel file. Moreover, Fast Quiz allows you to create your own tests and exams, providing you with templates for two types of photo quizzes, true-false or pairing exams, as well as multiple choice or word completion tests. These can then be administered to specific students. A handy teacher's aid Overall, Fast Quiz proves to be a useful piece of software whose intention is to help education professionals better organize your activity and students, while also enabling you to create various exercises for them. However, it still has some work to do in what concerns its general user-friendliness, since working with it can become frustrating at times, which may deter many from continuing to use it.
