Naturopathic Doctor and researcher Lara Snyers uses natural remedies to treat her patients. 5:00 am Wed August 22, 2013 Risky Prescriptions A prison drug smuggler thinks he's found a free pass to America. He's been promised a luxury private-jet ride out of Montreal, just ahead of the U.S. Border Patrol. On June 20, he hopped a fence on the Canadian side of the Niagara River. He crossed into the U.S. and took the drugs to a "cutting agent" who was waiting just across the river in Lewiston, New York. The good news is that he's been arrested and he is supposed to receive a five-year prison sentence. The bad news: He's one of many, many people to be arrested in Canada to slip undetected into the U.S. In the past three years, the RCMP says border agents have caught more than 3,000 foreigners trying to enter the U.S. illegally at the Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba border crossings. That includes people seeking jobs in the U.S., but it also includes people who are fleeing conflicts, poverty, persecution and political unrest in their own countries. Many of those fleeing live just across the river from the U.S. border, on the Canadian side of the water. A number of the people arrested for illegal entry have been convicted of using the U.S. as a last-minute escape from Canada, but don't get the impression that this is a risk-free option. In the Lewiston area, local residents say that their pets and themselves have been caught in the crossfire. "Sometimes people are screaming at each other, sometimes they're fighting, but it's out in the open. It's not
